

New Zealand Institute of Architects Incorporated

Industrial and heritage buildings win Western Architecture Awards

- Information under strict embargo until 9pm, Friday 10 May
- Download a gallery of award winners: High-res gallery or Low-res gallery
- Please credit photographers per this index

Heritage buildings in Palmerston North, Stratford and Whanganui and buildings that support New Plymouth's energy industry have been recognised in the 2019 Western Architecture Awards.

The Awards, which were announced at an event in New Plymouth, are part of the nationwide New Zealand Architecture Awards programme run by the New Zealand Institute of Architects (NZIA) and supported by Resene.

Through the awards, the NZIA aims to demonstrate the contribution of high-quality architecture to the development of New Zealand's cities, towns and communities

Eleven projects received awards after shortlisted entries were visited by a jury convened by New Plymouth architect Ian Spiers and including New Plymouth architect Scott Ferguson, New Plymouth designer Trudie Hudson and Wellington architect John Bannatyne.

"Our region has a number of architecturally significant homes that have lasted well and are still providing good service after many years of occupation," Spiers said.

"It has been satisfying to acknowledge these older buildings and also to visit heritage buildings that have been strengthened and repurposed for many more decades of use."

Spiers said one awards highlight was Fenton Street Art Collective, a Housing-Alterations and Additions winner. Designed by New Plymouth practice Boon, the two-storey, 1920s building in Stratford was unused and run down until 2017, when a process of restoration began.

"Today, it is a bustling, flexible and contemporary space that meets a range of new uses, including café, boutique distillery, writer's den, office space and open-plan loft home."

The jury gave Architecture HDT a Hospitality Award for the skilful design of Little Savanna, a restaurant and bar within a Palmerston North heritage building that is now a "local attention grabber."

New Plymouth's Itch Wine Bar also received a Hospitality Award. Designed by Gibbons Architects, the "carefully detailed bar within the recently restored White Hart Hotel responds consistently and creatively to the surrounding building with features that reference original elements," the jury said.

Two projects won Enduring Architecture Awards, which are given to awarded to buildings more than 25 years old which have stood the test of time and still perform valuable service.

One Enduring Architecture Award went to the McCallum House (1965), the home of architect Don McCallum. The house is located in the Turere Place Modern Houses Precinct – a Whanganui cul-de-sac notable for architecturally significant modernist dwellings.

“Using a modest, modernist vernacular – steel framing, concrete block walls, and ample glazing – the architect established a house that sits easily in the landscape and enjoys a close connection to its surrounds,” the jury said.

Nga Tawa Diocesan’s Main School Building (1925) also received an Enduring Architecture Award. At just shy of 100 years old, the building designed by WF Higgins Architect has housed many generations of students.

“It has a strong and clear form,” said the jury. “The robust materials of the building’s construction have lasted well to provide generations of students with memorable, homely spaces.”

Commercial Architecture Awards went to two support buildings for New Plymouth’s energy industry.. One is Todd Energy’s $12 million Mckee Mangahewa operations facility at Tikorangi, designed by Isthmus Group.

“This building works hard to be more than just a workplace, with staff facilities, including the cafeteria, taking pole position in the plan to gain the best views and outdoor access,” the jury said.

Powerco’s new Nation Operations Centre, designed by Boon, is also a Commercial Architecture Award winner.

“The campus-style workplace is designed to connect and engage staff in a comfortable and productive environment”, the jury said.

Ardern Peters Architects designed two of the three new houses that won awards.

The St Georges Guest House, located in Okato, accommodates the client’s extended family and friends, and “confidently starts an architectural dialogue with the existing house on the site and provides a well-used courtyard for welcome shelter from prevailing winds”.

Ardern Peters Architects second award was for McC House, in Lepperton, which “references a ‘rural vernacular’ through simple forms and material selections”.

The jury said the Clark Residence in Palmerston North is “well-executed, compact, and energy efficient”, the jury said. “There is much to like about this house built on a small rear site. 242am Architects has worked hard to meet the client’s ambition of saving as many existing native trees as possible, integrating seamlessly with the landscape, and leaving a small carbon footprint.”

AB Studio, by Copeland Associates Architects, received a Small Project Award. The Taihape building is a “delightful, cleverly designed compact studio positioned on an elevated site to take advantage of views and light”, the jury said.

“The building footprint is small, but the sense of volume created through double-height space is impressive.”

For more information, images of winning projects or to arrange an interview with jury convenor Ian Spiers, or the architects of award-winning projects, please contact:

Justine McCleary

New Zealand Architecture Awards Publicist

Phone: 022 402 3526

Email: justine@hartillpr.co.nz

Western Architecture Awards: all winners

Commercial Architecture

Powerco NOC, New Plymouth, Boon,
McKee Mangahewa Operations Facility, Tikorangi, Isthmus Group,

Enduring Architecture

McCallum House, Whanganui, Don McCallum Architect
Nga Tawa Diocesan School – Main Building, Marton, WF Higgins Architect

Hospitality

Little Savanna, Palmerston North, Architecture HDT
Itch Wine Bar, New Plymouth, Gibbons Architects

Housing

Clark Residence, Palmerston North, 242am Architects
St Georges Guest House, Okato, Ardern Peters Architects
McC House, Lepperton, Ardern Peters Architects,

Housing – Alterations and Additions

Fenton Street Art Collective, New Plymouth, Boon,

Small Project Architecture

AB Studio, Taihape, Copeland Associates Architects