Practice Directory 2025

Choosing an architect from the directory

The Institute website (nzia.co.nz) offers helpful advice in selecting and working with the right architect for your project.

When you first consider using the services of an architect, you are from the outset advised to ensure that the person you consult is, in fact, qualified.

A multitude of professional and occupational groups offer (or claim to offer) architectural and design services. However it is illegal in this country, for anyone to call themselves an architect unless they are registered as such by the NZRAB. Registration is earned through a combination of academic qualifications, considerable practical experience, and rigorous examination. Only when a very high standard has been reached are practitioners recognised as possessing the necessary level of knowledge, technical competence, responsibility and integrity to practice an architect.

This directory is an excellent place from which to begin your search because you can be certain that every Architect Principal of the Institute Practices listed is fully qualified and registered.

Using this directory

All practices are listed alphabetically according to geographic regions. There are eight geographic regions across Aotearoa New Zealand (below). The following information is included for each practice as appropriate:

Practice name, address and contact details

The Principals or Partners who are architect members of Institute are listed for each practice in the office in which they are based. In some instances, such as where there is a 'branch' office or similar, the name given is that of a non-resident Principal.

The letters NZIA/FNZIA/DFNZIA denote Professional Member (Architect)/Fellow/Distinguished Fellow of the Institute. The letters PPNZIA denote Past President.

In most instances the Institute Practice has made a short statement to describe the Practice.

In considering any of the listed practices, further information can be sought from them on skills, experience and qualifications and on the work they have undertaken for their clients to date. You should also check out the Institute's website for more details.
